What's Naegi Castle Ruins?

History
A short distance from Nakatsugawa Station stands the ruins of Naegi Castle constructed 400 years ago and once home to the prominent Toyama Family.

In 1871, the buildings were destroyed and today, all that remains are the impressive stone foundations.

This detail is actually quite a unique feature, since many other castles were built on flat planes and the foundations were constructed along with the castle itself.

At the top of the complex, visitors can find a well-placed observation tower, which offers an astounding view of the Nakatsugawa landscape as well as Kiso River.

Highlight
Although being long gone, there is still quite a lot to see while walking around the castle grounds. Most noticeable are perhaps the large natural stones which served as the foundation of the original castle.
